

Assist Prof Nik Darabos MD Ph. D. Prim.

Permanent Mission of Republic of Croatia to the WHO Nik Darabos is currently the Croatian health representative, minister plenipotentiary, in charge of WHO, in Geneva Switzerland.

He creates new values in his career by combining his skills and knowledge based on three university degrees: in medicine with an advanced university degree in the public health-related field of Biomedicine, in the social-related area of Diplomacy, and the field of Business Management in Health Systems.

He has more than 15 years of professional experience in managing and developing technical public health programs at the domestic level and more than 10 years at the international multilateral or bilateral levels.

In 2021, he was appointed as regional coordinator for the EURO region where he coordinated and represented the interests of 53 countries, focusing on the key areas of WHO work including strategic health leadership, and advocacy.

darabos.dr@gmail.com